Ohio Crane Migration

Sandhill cranes cross Ohio in narrow, noisy, very high flights, and the population using the state has grown from almost nothing in the 1980s to a reliable spring and autumn passage. They are heard far more often than they are seen: the call carries for miles and the birds are frequently specks.

Why this group has its own gauge

One species, one seat, because a crane passage looks and sounds like nothing else and happens on its own schedule. The chart above carries 1 species, sliced out of the full 67-row bird chart.

The rows on this chart

Species	Northbound	Southbound	Winters
Sandhill Crane	20 February – 5 April	10 October – 10 December	Florida, Georgia and the Gulf coast

Where this sits

The full picture is on Ohio bird migration, which carries every group on one chart. Each mark on the breadcrumb strip at the top of the site links to the page for its own group.
